L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

OKYO, Sept. 21—(INS)—Gen. glas MacArthur ordered the mediate arrest today of Gen.
ji Doihara, commander of the Japanese General Army and the Eastern Army District Headquarters in a renewed roundup of senior war criminals.

Doihara succeeded to the post of Army commander only this after Field Marshal Gen. Sugawara committed suicide Sept. 12.

arges against Doihara were immediately specified but he has been identified with aggressive military cliques of the Imperial Army.

Wednesday afternoon, Doimura conferred with Gen. Robert L.
Belger, occupation commander of the Tokyo area, and pledged united cooperation with the occupation program and promised to in apprehending war criminals.

United headquarters previously announced today that John Holmes, an Australian who was named MacArthur's original war criminal, had been arrested.

land was charged with propaganda activities for the Japs on Shanghai. The Australian found on Hokkaido, northern Japan home island, and is now in custody of U. S. Eighth Army police.

DOYLESTOWN WOMAN DIES AS RESULT OF BURNS SUFFERED IN BLAZE WHICH TOOK LIFE OF TWO BABIES YESTERDAY

Miss Salome M. Rickert, 58, Succumbs in Abington Hospital—Flames Guttured Her Home As She Attempted to Build Fire in Basement — Had Seven Bucks County Wards Under Her Care.

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 21—A third death occurred yesterday afternoon as the result of the disastrous fire which followed an explosion here yesterday morning.

Miss Salome M. Rickert, 58, died six hours after being burned in a fire following an explosion which took the lives of two infants, of the Bucks county courts.

Yesterday morning was chilly
Miss Rickert, who cares for infant wards of the Bucks county courts in her home at 360 N. Broad street went downstairs to light the heater.

An explosion and fire followed it which two children lost their lives and Miss Rickert herself was fatally burned as she staggered from the house with a third baby in her arms. She died six hours later.

The two young victims were Richard Janney, six months old,
a county ward, and Walter Smith, 17 months old yesterday, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, who lived in the house. Mrs. Smith assisted Miss Rickert in caring for the children.

Five other children, county wards in Miss Rickert's care, were playing on a porch. Neighbors rescued them, uninjured.

It is believed coal gas in the stuffed pipes caused the blast.
The explosion did not injure Miss Rickert. She rushed out of a cellar door, then up the steps and into the front door, trying to reach the children.

Richard and Walter were separated from her by solid sheets of flame. She grabbed the third child, while fire licked through her clothes, beat her way outside and deposited the child on the porch.
Then she collapsed.

The Doylestown Fire Company
arrived and she was rushed to Abington Memorial Hospital in the fire company's ambulance. She died there at 4 p. m., hopelessly burned over major portions of her body.

Mrs. Smith was on the second floor. Flames barred her from her child.

Mrs. Smith jumped from a window, receiving slight bruises.
Within half an hour firemen beat back the fire. They found the two charred bodies. Contents of the house were destroyed.

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

LEANED BY SCRIBES

There was competition in every lass at the flower show held Tuesday afternoon in Wycombe Baptist Church under the auspices of the Linghocken Garden Club.

The judges, Mrs. S. Paul Woodman, Newtown, and Miss Drum,
of the county home economics office, Doylestown, who scored on the point system, complimented the members upon their interest, and stated they were surprised to find competition in every class.

The Bucks County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held its first fall meeting Monday afternoon at Elkins Park.

A luncheon was served to 30 members by a committee composed of Mrs. Frank Acton, Mrs. William York and Mrs. John Chambers.

As it was Constitution Day, Mrs.
Frank Acton read a paper on the Constitution. Other papers were read by Mrs. Arvine Clarke and Mrs. J. Herman Barnsley.

Frank J. Magrory, aged 69, a veteran of the Spanish-American War and a constable in Warrington township for about 20 years, was found dead at his home on Pickertown road, near Warrington, on Tuesday.

A neighbor, going to the Ma-gory home, found him lying at the foot of the stairway leading from the first floor to the cellar. Mr.
Magrory is believed to have gotten up during the night, and to have

Navy Pilot Gives Thrilling
Story of Many Sea
Battles

AT EXCHANGE SESSION

Twenty-two members and two guests attended the first meeting of the Exchange Club for the fall season last evening in the Elks Home.

President Charles F. Boyd was named by the club to attend the community "workshop" course, sponsored by the Travel Club. William H. H. Fine was named as an alternate.

The guest speaker of the evening was Lt. Thomas A. Campion, navy pilot, who has rejoined the Bristol high school faculty.

Lt. Campion traced the course of his navy career from the time of his enlistment in August, 1941. His training began at New York in midshipman school aboard the U.
S. S. "Prairie State." Upon graduation from midshipman's school he was commissioned an ensign, but volunteered to accept service and training as a naval aviation cadet.

This meant giving up his rank as ensign and starting as a seaman.
His aviation training was received at Corpus Christi, Texas, and Miami, Fla. Upon qualification as a pilot he again was commissioned an ensign. He was then assigned for special instruction to a torpedo plane squadron, and received valuable training on Atlantic patrol.

When the U. S. S. "Wasp" was commissioned as an aircraft carrier, he was assigned along with his torpedo squadron to that ship,
for service in the Pacific.

Lt. Campion's experiences in the attacks on Marcus, Wake, and the Marshall Islands were of great interest to his audience, and his easy and life-like description of the life aboard an aircraft carrier added to the hair-raising story.

During his nine months on active duty in the Pacific he participated in the preparation for the landings on Tarawa, Saipan and Guam. His account of the Philippine sea battles was the highlight of his experiences.

NEWS OF OTHER MEN

Pfc. John Monachello, 1711 Farnagut avenue, is now a rifleman in the 407th Infantry, and is contin-ing his training in Germany. His regiment is situated in the Bavarian Mountains near the town of Degeedort.

His training schedule includes such standard topics as the study of all the weapons used in the infantry, marches, infantry tactics and battle drill. The training differs, however, from that given in the States, in that Pfc. Monachello may spend his afternoons either by playing ball or by attending school. In addition to this training Pvt. Monachello's duties include guard duty on road junctions, checking all by-passing vehicles and pedestrians, and performing occupational duties in general.

Pvt. Monachello entered the army in January, 1943, and came overseas in February, 1944. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Monachello. He received his training at Ft. Meade, Md., and is a graduate of Bristol high school. He holds the ETO, 5 stars; Bronze Arrowhead, and combat badge.

Agree to Continue
Center at Bensalem

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Sept. 21
The first meeting of the term for Cornwells Parent-Teacher Association, held last evening in Bensalem Township high school, offered a promise of many activities for the benefit of the school. Mrs. C.
Burnley White presided.

After the introduction of teachers and new committee members, the group discussed continuation of the Youth Center at Andalusia, which has been sponsored by the P. T. A. for the past two years. All agreed that the center is a necessary element in the community.

Mrs. Francis Thomas, third grade teacher, was presented with the banner and a $2 prize for her room, this group of pupils having the largest percentage of parents represented at the session.

Elmer Vansant and Otto Grupp led the members in group singing.
Adjoining to the cafeteria for refreshments, the 107 in attendance had an opportunity to meet the new members of the faculty and to again greet those who have been members of the staff for a time.

The informal, friendly manner in which the meeting and social hour were conducted was, according to officials, the keynote of success of the affair.

At the October gathering motion pictures will follow the transaction of business.

JURY RETURNS SEALED VERDICT IN STABBING CASE

James Porreca, Perkasio,
Accused of Stabbing Geo.
Porcelli, of Sellersville

COSTS ARE DIVIDED

Judge Rules That 75% of Costs Be Paid By The Defendant

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 21—Still suffering from shell shock, a returned veteran of World War No. 2 appeared in court Wednesday as the prosecutor of a former Sellers-ville clothing factory worker who allegedly stabbed him twice in the back with a pair of scissors during an argument in the plant on February 9.

The defendant and accuser is James Porreca, 32, of Elghth and Callowhill sts., Perkasio, now a junk dealer, but formerly a worker in the Lutz Clothing Factory in Sellersville. The prosecutor is George Porcelli, 21, of Sellersville.
Both men formerly worked at the Lutz factory. Porreca is not naturalized. Porcelli served overseas and was honorably discharged from the Army after suffering from battle fatigue.

According to testimony presented before a jury and Judge Hiram H.
Keller, Porreca is alleged to have called Porcelli, the overseas veteran "a traitor" and other names.
That is alleged to have started the argument that ended in a fist fight and stabbing.

Testimony in the case was completed and counsel for both sides,
District Attorney Edward G. Bies-ter for the Commonwealth, and Webster S. Achey for the defendant, made their speeches to the jury. Judge Keller charged the jury when court convened Thursday morning.

The jury returned a sealed verdict of not guilty, early Thursday afternoon, placing 75 per cent of the costs on the defendant and 25%
of the costs on the prosecutor.
Judge Keller advised the defendant that if he ever got back into court he would see to it that he was dealt with accordingly.

Members of the jury: Anna E.
Schmidt, Morrisville RD 1; Wilmer
W. Cressman, Quakertown RD 2;
Josephine C. Hall, Newtown; Ida
B. Furness, Upper Black Eddy;
Marie B. McKnight, Langhorne RD
1; John C. Busche, Morrisville;
Clara K. Johnson, Bristol RD 1;
Alfred E. A. Bronson, Hulmeville;
Leona Agnew Ruch, Upper Black
Eddy; Josephine I. Stover, Quaker-town RD 3; Maris M. Hart, Bristol; John Claude Harwick, Zion Hill.

On the witness stand Porcelli, the prosecutor, testified as to his version of the affair, and how Por-reca attacked him first. He stated that he still felt the affects of the two stab wounds.

Mrs. Luther Bedford, a worker at the Lutz plant and an eye witness to part of the fight, testified that she did not see the defendant stab Porcelli but that she did see the two fighting and saw scissors in Porcelli's hand at the time.

Howard Barsley, of Allentown, another worker at the Lutz plant, testified that Porcelli was his helper; that he heard there had been an argument and that he saw fists flying between Porreca and Porcelli. He testified that he heard Porreca say that "he had a right to stab him because Porcelli was a bigger man than he was." The witness didn't see the actual stabbing.

REMINISCES ON DAYS ENJOYED IN AFRICA

His 70 Years

William Hugh Inglis, at present a resident of Rogers Road, Bristol more than 70 years a wealth of experience and thrills that led him from his birth-place in Manchester, Lancashire, England, to Africa, on to South America, over to France, back to Africa, and eventually to the United States of America.

Thirty years of this period were spent on the Dark Continent—Africa, which to him is not dark but one of the brightest spots on the face of the globe. Of Mr. Inglis it can truly be said that his heart is in Africa, and today his hours are filled with thoughts of that coun-

with actually placing on paper in three decades that mark the hap-

Feast of "Sukos" To Be Marked in Synagogues

The ancient Feast of "Sukos," meaning "Booths," celebrated for eight days beginning at sun-down today, and for nine days in Orthodox synagogues, was originally a harvest festival and a period of thanksgiving. Reminiscent of the days when Israelites, and other oriental peoples, because of the short harvest season, when fruits and crops had to be gathered speedily, dwelt in booths in the field, it is also a time to recall the fact that the children of Israel dwelt in booths in the wilderness when they journeyed out of Egypt. Their wandering in the wilderness was followed by entrance into the Promised Land—an augury of the Promised Land we hope the nations of the world will now enter if we inaugurate a real era of peace.

Many congregations erect booths in a suitable place in the synagogue and decorate them with fruit and other products of the fall harvest, and many families and synagogues still erect booths for the entire Sukos period.

CHALLENGE FACING BUSINESS

Not long ago an OPA official said that it wasn't going to require high-priced salesmanship to get products, denied to civilians during the war, into the hands of consumers. Apparently this bird, whose business background no doubt would make interesting reading, had the bright thought that the backlog of demand was so great that salesmen were not needed.

Now the opposite view is expressed by another Washington bureaucrat. Ted R. Gamble, national director of the war finance division of the United States Treasury Department says that much of the liquid purchasing power in this country, estimated at $160,000,000,000, is represented by investments in War Bonds and that, despite the impact of these investments on the economy of the years ahead, American business and industry face a challenge in inducing people to part with this money for American products.

"They are not going to buy the first gadget or gimmick offered," he said.

Apparently this is where the salesmen come in. Regardless of what one thinks of a payroller referring to the products of American industry as gadgets or gimmicks, it is reasonable to suppose also that consumers might not buy the second product offered, or the third or the fourth, if no salesmen were active in showing them that their purchases would prove beneficial.

RATTLESNAKE RELIGION

Americans who have read with objective interest about the strange religious rites of certain savage tribes of the earth—rites that involve animal worship and human sadism—now may contemplate with some concern the outcropping of the same kind of fanaticism in this country.

The other day the faithful few of the Dolly Pond Church of God, near Chattanooga, Tennessee—not far from the scene of the Scopes evolution trial of two decades ago—surrounded by a crowd of the curious, buried Brother Lewis Ford, a lay preacher, as he had wished—fondling and exhibiting over his open casket the rattlesnake that killed him.

Mr. Ford had been struck in the hand at a "religious" service and died an hour later. At his funeral service the members of his bereaved family were "moved by the Lord" to snatch from boxes a dozen reptiles on hand, as "Brother Lewis wanted." Mrs. Ford stood by the coffin, clutching the snakes as they were given her. The "Rev." Raymond Hayes told the crowd that he was bitten on the ankle during the service but that the bite meant nothing because of "the power of my belief."

Sheriff's deputies were present to keep the crowd back of the roped-off area.

This sort of thing has been going on for some time in Tennessee rural communities. Efforts to stamp it out have raised the cry of persecution, because those who engage in these shenanigans call the result religion.

Sept. 21—Two Bristol (Pa.) Navy men, James W. Fry, R.M. 2/c, Walnut street, and Nicholas V. Sacchi, S. 1/c, Jefferson avenue, sailed into Tokyo Bay aboard this ship and landed the first occupation forces on the conquered soil of Japan. A few hours before General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's triumphant arrival at Atsugi airfield, the "Grimes" landed a contingent of Marines on the beach at Futatabi Saki, on the eastern shore of Tokyo Bay, after moving past the silenced Jap batteries of 16-inch guns.

The "Grimes" flagship for Transport Division 60, previously had participated in some of the major Pacific operations, including the Shima and Okinawa. On her first important mission, she braved shore gunfire to evacuate troops from Iwo Jima.

T/5 Gaston E. Denis, of Second avenue, was discharged from the Army at Borden General Hospital, Chickasha, Okla., after three months of hospitalization.

"Drugless Therapy" Subject of Address

surgical treatment not licensed under the Pennsylvania State Medical Board.

"The principle trade names for drugless therapy include chiropractic, naturotherapy, neurotherapy and physiotherapy," Dr. Smith pointed out.

"One very good example of physiotherapy is that of Dr. Sister Kenny who has achieved remarkable results in her treatment of infantile paralysis."

"Chiropractic deals with the spinal joints particularly. When a chiropractic joint such as the wrist becomes inflamed a stiffness develops which can be felt by the patient and this can be worked and loosened and the stiffness dispensed. But when a spinal joint becomes inflamed, affecting the nerves and health of a person, the stiffness cannot be felt. If this can be loosened without any ill effects the nerve and health condition will be removed."

"Naturotherapy is centuries old, and came from Austria and other countries in Europe. Bernard McFadden has used this water cure and has probably helped more people to become healthy than any other single man in any previous era."

"Physiotherapy has at last come into its own and this high-frequency treatment for the temporary reduction of high blood pressure was used as far back as the Franco-Prussian War."

"Four years after the end of World War I a certain class of patients in the Walter Reed Hospital were given up as totally and permanently disabled. This group of patients was given up as total wrecks. Then the physiotherapy treatment was applied and at the end of six months, ten percent of the patients were discharged from the hospital, and at the end of 18 months another ten percent was discharged."

"Rotary has a special interest in crippled children, and with the exception of surgery, physiotherapy is the best help for these children when the injury is from birth or accidents."

Dr. Smith pointed out in conclusion that drugless therapy is, or should be, always a specialty and not an obsession, and that it has a very important role to play.

CHAPTER ONE

AGNES THAYER sat stiffly before her handsome desk, checking lists for tonight's party. She was a spare, angular woman, the lines of her body sharp as her tongue. Neither the marcelled coils of brown hair on her fallow forehead nor her expensive black-and-white print dress could disguise the fact that she looked more like an old-fashioned schoolteacher than Mrs. Howard Thayer, mistress of Black Oaks, the famous old Thayer house.

The blazing August sun poured through the open French windows. But Agnes ignored the physical discomfort. There was still so much to do, flowers for the drawing room, "I'll call the florist," she decided. "There aren't near enough flowers in the garden." There was an even more exasperating problem, though. Extra maids. She must have at least two, with so many people coming.

Agnes suffered acutely from the servant shortage. No sooner did she find the perfect cook, the intelligent gardener, than her husband, Howard, snatched them away for service at the Thayer-Jelke plant. "They're much more useful turning out engines for bombers than serving tea and cookies to the Woman's Club," he assured her tartly. "We're fighting a war, Agnes."

As if she could forget it! Agnes' pale lips compressed with a martyred expression. No one could say Mrs. Howard Thayer wasn't doing her share. The Red Cross, the U.S.O., the Scrap Drive. And the Springdale Health Association.

Now there was a sore spot with Agnes. Against her wishes; against her blunt, outspoken objections, the Committee had decided to offer the job of Health Officer to young Dr. Gail Benton.

The door opened and her stepdaughter, Lucienne, came in. "My dear," Agnes said reprovingly, "you are supposed to rest after lunch."

Lucienne's slim, eighteen-year-old body was enveloped in a white pique housecoat, fastened at the waist by a blue satin bow. Her shoulder-length blonde hair was combed in slavish imitation of Veronica Lake's hairdo. But there was shining intelligence in the sherry-colored eyes, good common sense in the sturdy little hands. "I'm fed up with rest! That's all I did for three weeks in the hospital." She padded across the rug and flopped into a chintz-covered chair, stretching her legs out before her. "All this nonsense for a mere appendectomy. I'm coming downstairs tonight."

"Indeed not, Lucienne. You know what Doctor McCormick said."

"Doctor McCormick?" Lucienne said serenely. "may be your idea of God, but I think he's a stuffed shirt. Why don't we use Gail Benton as our family doctor, anyway?"

"Doctor McCormick is not only the head of the Thayer Hospital," Agnes answered coldly, "but he is the best doctor in Beauchamp. And Gail—"

"I know. Gail's only a poor relation," Lucienne lit a cigarette, blowing smoke with more enthusiasm than skill. "Where's Aunt Reyna?"

"She went back upstairs after lunch. I believe she's working on her book."

"What a wonderful life she's had! I mean, living in Europe all these years, and knowing practically everybody. It must've been awfully gay—"

"I see nothing wonderful," Agnes said, "about a woman who ruined her life through her own foolhardy actions. I shouldn't call an unmarried woman of fifty either successful or gay." Agnes chose to forget that if it weren't for Howard's inexplicable second choice, she might have suffered a similar fate.

As if to answer her accusations, the door opened again and Reyna Thayer blocked the threshold. She was of medium height, though a generous bosom and hips tended to make her appear shorter. Her kinky black hair was pulled off her low forehead. Her small, deep-set black eyes snapped with vitality. She wore a dressing gown of mauve satin, the ruff of which encroached on her short, thick neck. She managed somehow to look both unregsive and ridiculous. "Ladies' Day?" she asked.

"Come in, Reyna," Agnes frowned slightly. "You look tired, are you all right?"

"Well," Reyna answered judiciously, "my throat feels as if it were coated with sawdust."

"You may have picked up a cold on the train."

Reyna had arrived in Beauchamp only yesterday. On last December seventh, she had been caught in Hawaii where she was writing a series of articles on the pineapple industry for Leaders' Magazine. After Pearl Harbor, she had stayed on, writing vivid, graphic stories for the American press. In July she had finally heeded her brother Howard's pleas and had sailed for the United States. Tonight Agnes was giving a party in her honor. "I suppose my old friends will tell me I haven't changed... much," Reyna's clipped voice was wryly amused. "I dare them!"

"It's been ages since you left Beauchamp, hasn't it, Aunt Reyna?" Lucienne asked. She was tremendously impressed by her newly-found aunt. Lucienne admired women who did things. That was why she was so crazy about Gail Benton.

"Thirty years, my pet. And if I'd had any sense, I wouldn't have come back."

SYNOPSIS

Beauchamp's leading family, the Howard Thayers are to entertain that night in honor of Howard's middle-aged sister, Reyna, author and world traveler, whom the war had forced home after being thirty years abroad. Lucienne, Howard's attractive young daughter by a previous marriage, admires Aunt Reyna almost as much as she does her cousin, young Gail Benton, the only woman doctor in Beauchamp. Agnes, Howard's domineering wife, and Lucienne, who is convalescing from a recent appendectomy, are chatting with Reyna.

CHAPTER TWO

"Do you find the town so changed?" "Not the town so much... but myself." She moved to one of the tall, chintz-hung windows and stared out at the sun-drenched garden. "You can't go home any more," she said softly. "Thomas Wolfe was right... Well," she turned back toward her sister-in-law, "tell me about the family. Howard has always been the worst letter-writer in the world."

"There is very little to tell," Agnes finally put aside her lists. "We do our best by our obligations. Howard has carried on the tradition set by old Marcus Thayer."

Reyna stared at her unbelievably. Lord help us, she's serious. Why, she plays the role of Mrs. Howard Thayer with the flourish a ham actor gives Shakespeare!

"If you're going to talk about the family," Lucienne said, "tell Aunt Reyna about Gail Benton."

"Gail Benton," Reyna said, "must be Cousin Honoré's daughter?" "She is," Agnes answered caustically. "Honoré fell in love with a young mechanic at the factory and eloped with him. You should remember the story, Reyna. I believe it happened the year before you left Beauchamp."

"I'd forgotten about it. Was Honoré happy with her young man?" Agnes touched her pale cheek with her fingers. "I don't know. Honoré always had a smile on her face, so you couldn't tell how she really felt. Her husband was killed in an accident when their little girl was about a year old. Honoré had no money, so Howard gave her a job in the office and saw to it that she earned enough to keep her and the child comfortable. Gail was about seventeen when Honoré herself died. We did our best for Gail..."

Watching Agnes' tight, sharp-featured face, Reyna thought com-

pride, let alone the pride of a Thayer. "Father lent Gail enough money to get through medical school," Lucienne added eagerly, "but as soon as she got out, she started paying it back. She only earned about twenty dollars a month interning at the hospital, but she sent father five of it."

"How long has she been in practice?" Reyna's imagination was stimulated by Lucienne's enthusiasm.

"About four years. And do you know, Aunt Reyna, she's just about the smartest young doctor in town. I mean, she and another doctor—his name is Ralph Kramer—are tops!"

Beauchamp, Wisconsin, had the Her pet little face colored charmingly. "I heard one of the nurses at the hospital say that when Doctor McCormick picks his new assistant, it's sure to be either Gail or Ralph Kramer."

"She sounds all right," Reyna smiled. "I suppose she'll show up very often." Lucienne said impulsively. "The most Gail usually gets is a monthly invitation to family dinners."

"Now, really, Lucienne—" Agnes regarded her young stepdaughter humorously. "You are giving Reyna a wrong impression. You know how many people I have on my list—people I must invite. And just because Gail is related to us doesn't mean she is our responsibility."

"Gail wouldn't take a thing from you," Lucienne said heatedly. "You know how proud she is."

"She is not only proud," Agnes retorted, "she is also insufferably stubborn. That girl is riding for a fall, mark my words!"

"And you sound as if you hope she'll get it," Reyna said rudely. And decided that she would like young Gail. If only to spite poor, stupid, snobbish Agnes.

Every town has its royal family.

"Agnes doesn't invite Gail to parties very often," Lucienne told Reyna.

Jury Returns A Sealed Verdict in Stabbing Case

another worker testified that he was near the scene of action on the morning of Feb. 9, 1945; that he was facing Porcelli, that he saw blood on Porcelli's back and that he picked up the scissors off the floor. He testified there was an inch of blood on the end of the scissors, and identified the scissors that were offered in evidence by the Commonwealth. Fais said he did not see the actual blows.

Dr. C. A. Kressley, of Sellersville, testified that he attended Porcelli at the Grand View Hospital and later, for a period of three weeks. Dr. Kressley stated that one of the stab wounds was to the right of the spine and the other to the left. The stab wound to the left of the spine, Dr. Kressley testified, might very easily have punctured the lung. The witness testified that he treated the victim for three weeks; that sulfa drugs were used and that it is entirely possible that Porcelli still feels the effects of the stabbing.

Leslie Johnson, Perkaskie RD 3, a fireman at the Lutz clothing plant, testified that he saw blood stains on Porcelli's shirt.

Opening for the defense, Attorney Achey asked the jury to acquit his client; that Porcelli started the fight, and to put the costs on Porcelli, the prosecutor.

The defendant Porcelli, who admitted that he was not naturalized and that he was not a college graduate, asked the District Attorney to repeat question after question.

"A week before this fight started I was being kidded at the plant," Porcelli testified. "They would call me 'wop' and other names but it was more or less all in fun. Porcelli told me at the plant one day that he had heard plenty about me and that I should keep my mouth shut or he'd paste it shut. On the morning of February 9, about 9:30, I was working in the factory and was using a pair of scissors in my work. Porcelli called me a 'wop' and said that he wanted me to stop calling him a traitor. He started the fight and hit me seven or eight times and knocked me on the floor. I had the scissors still in my hands but didn't realize it. I got off the floor and gave him a couple of blows to defend myself and he got cut; I didn't intend to injure him. I hit him four times, two with my left and two with my right. I didn't call him any names. Yes, it's true I came up swinging and cut him."

Julia Zuracki, of Sellersville RD 1, testified that she saw part of the fight, that she saw the prosecutor punch the defendant; and that she didn't see the scissors herself, but saw both men fighting.

Earl S. Lutz, of Sellersville, one of the owners of the Lutz factory, testified that he closed his plant entirely yesterday—employing 135 people—because of the fact that so many witnesses were needed in court, and because the type of work done necessitates most of the employees being at work.

Lutz testified as a defense witness that it is the usual custom for a serger, like Porcelli, to handle scissors in his work. He testified that he found the two men fighting and adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock when Judge Keller charged the jury.

Judge Keller directed that Harold Lapping, of Quakertown RD 3, pay testimony had been offered by the Commonwealth.

At this point the defense rested $5 a week toward the support of

BUNNIES OPEN GRID SEASON TONIGHT AT TRENTON FIELD

High School Squad Ready To Play First Game With Trenton Catholic

"POLIO" BAN IS LIFTED

Bad Weather Has Handicapped Coach Stackhouse in Workouts

After weeks of intensive drilling and practicing, Coach Harold L. Sta. House has picked the squad which will represent Bristol High School on the gridiron this season. The Bunnies open their season tonight at 8:15 o'clock, meeting Trenton Catholic, under the lights on Dean Field, Trenton.

The "polio" ban in Trenton has been lifted and school children will be permitted at the game. The lifting of the ban also permits Coach Stackhouse to use nine players who were under the ban age. The players are "Mike" Iannucci, Dave Cori, Mike Pone, Pat Finegan, Jimmy Sottile, Tommy Strong, Tony Esposito, Donald DeLong, and Charles Long. Sottile and Strong are backs while the rest are linemen.

Bad weather has handicapped Coach Stackhouse in his workout this week although he feels confident that the localities will make a better showing against Trenton Catholic than it did last season when the Bunnies were trimmed.

However, Coach Stackhouse has selected the following as his starting lineup: Ends, Sebastiano Cani, Robert Coles, or Edward Harms; tackles, Bill Foltz, Lewis Iannucci, or William Moser; guards, Francis Singer, Sebastian Monachello, or Townsend; center, Lou Mart; backfield men, Vincent Feole, Salvatore Accardi, Johnny Centonze, Stan Lelinski, Carl Dimidio, and Henry Black.

Others who have shown up well in practice sessions and will be on the reserve list include: Bob Riedel, Glenn Shelly, Nick Gesualdi, William Pollard, Dick Neitzel, Joe St. Ger, Mama, DeVita, Vandegrift, Mahero, Bersani, Natale, Bessinger, and Yaniero.

Coach Stackhouse has not an experienced backfield player on the team, although several played junior varsity ball last season. He has placed some of his biggest players in the backfield in an effort to give it power. His entire backfield of last season, composing Bill Syse, Ed Fiorelli, Ed Capriotti, Joe McDevitt, Toby Oriola, and Joe Igarrella are all out of school while he at a lost Howard Keyes and Joe Favoroso, his ends, and Joe Embess, a tackle, and Mickey Mandio, who held down the center position for three seasons.

Last season, Coach Stackhouse's first year here, Bristol won seven and lost two. The defeats were at the hands of Trenton Catholic and Burlington, both Jersey schools. Trenton Catholic and Burlington were later crowned champions of their divisions in Jersey but Burlington lost its crown because of using an ineligible player.

Bristol has another night game on its schedule for next Friday night, playing Pottstown on the latter's field. Other new schools on the schedule are Tredegar-Easttown High School and Malvern Prep. Bensalem has dropped the local schedule while the only Lower Bucks County schools to be played are Morrisville and Langhorne. Of the ten games, four will be played at home.

SPORTSMEN'S BRIEFS

BY JOE ELBERSON

Still not here . . . with the northeaster the forefront of this week's railbird shooters expected the shooting to be improved but the boys who were out on the marshes found very few birds in. In many cases not even a single bird was jumped.

Ribbon winners . . . beagles owned by two Bristol sportsmen won honors at the field trials held at Mt. Laurel, N. J., last Sunday. William Kitter's "Schneider's Nellie" came in second, and "Francis Mark," owned by Edward Bonfrancesco, took fifth place honors.

Popular target rifle . . . the trail-blazing 22 caliber target rifle called the Model 52 which is so accurate that it made small bore shooting the most popular form of competitive marksmanship, celebrates its 25th anniversary this month.

This rifle that has frequently won every major small bore trophy and match in the world, was a postwar development of World War I. Although developed by Winchester, company engineers credit veterans of the First World War with the inspiration for the Model 52. Returned soldiers who had learned to use the bolt-action Springfield wanted a military bolt-action target rifle of 22 caliber.

After the Armistice many veterans wanted to retain their shooting skill in peacetime but the opportunities for target shooting with the 30-06 cartridge were practically nil.

The Springfield rifle required long ranges and there were few even of these. The long ranges, with their necessary cost of operation, made the sport of target shooting too expensive for most shooters.

Winchester engineers visualized a highly accurate rifle that would meet the requirements of the veterans, be within the price range of thousands of civilian shooters and would require ranges of from only 50 feet indoors to 200 yards outdoors on which each man could service his own targets. That rifle became the 52.

Where small bore rifle shooting had previously been confined to indoor galleries and to relatively little short range outdoor shooting, the new rifle not only dignified small bore shooting generally, but extended ranges to 200 yards and occasionally to 300 yards.

A match winner from the start, the Model 52 made its preview to shooters in 1919. The new rifle was taken to the National Rifle Matches held at Caldwell, N. J., for exhibition purposes, before national and internationally-known shooting experts. Practically every important match was won by the twelve of the twenty members of the American team who used the only Model 52s in existence at that time.

Then in the Dewar Trophy International Match, the Americans beat the English 13-94 points . . . with the same twelve 52s. In 1941, at the last of the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry since the start of World War II, this rifle was used by the winners of the first three places in the Critchfield Aggregate, the "World Series" of American small bore target shooting. This same rifle has won the highest ranking individual score for the U. S. in the big Dewar International Team Matches, in three consecutive years producing perfect 400x100 scores.

Field trials . . . the New Hope Fish, Game & Forestry Association plans a Beagle Field Trial on Sunday, October 7th. Drawing at Chester A. Magill's Club House, New Hope, at 8:30 a. m. on that date.

The same Association will also hold a Bird Dog Trial on Sunday, October 21st. Drawing at New Hope Recreation Center at 9 p. m. on Saturday, October 20th.

All beagle and bird dog owners are invited to enter their dogs, and all interested persons will be welcome in the gallery.

Edgely sportsmen to meet . . . next Tuesday evening, September 25th, members of the Edgely Rod & Gun Club will meet at 8 o'clock in the Headley Manor Fire House for their September meeting of the club.

30 years found most of his time given to this task, with the exception of 2½ years spent in France and two years in South America on the same type of work. During his last few years in Africa he was engaged in railroad construction work, helping to build new lines on the Cape, in the Free State, Natal and the Belgian Congo. Mr. Ingalls proudly possesses the paper which in French proclaims him a "Pioneer Citizen of Africa." Although a native of the British Isles, he has been a citizen of the United States for several years.

Mr. Ingalls operated a steam locomotive on the narrow-gauge, single-line railways throughout much of Africa. The rough, mountainous terrain caused many a thrilling jaunt, the most sensational of which is recounted in his story entitled "Rapid Transit" in which Ingalls miraculously escaped death on a wild, mountain ride.

Mr. Ingalls' accounts of Africa, given at first-hand, are of the terrific heat in parts with men seen dying like sheep from black-water fever and malaria as the railroads were cut through jungles; of the poisonous snakes (measuring up to six and eight feet in length); of the leopards, angered and dangerous at being disturbed from their rest by the railroad construction crews; and of herds of elephants seen on rare occasions.

The menace from the leopards lay in the fact that their hunting habits taking them out at night, and with rest disturbed in daylight hours by the railroad crews extending lines, they would pounce from tree limbs onto their prey. A constant watch was therefore necessary. "From the engines during my engineering days, I would see on occasion four or five lions together during our rides through the Sakania section."

The days spent in construction of railroad lines meant that the men would sleep in tent villages which would be advanced about five miles a time as the line was pushed through the jungles and over the mountain passes. It was during the time spent in the jungle with its unbearable heat that the men were tricken with black-water fever, malaria, and other tropical ailments.

That the advance of civilization "shifts" much game is the theory of not only Ingalls but others who have had good opportunity to observe such. "The building of the Sakania Railroad shifted much of the game to the east, toward Kenya colony. There is plenty of game in the latter section now," he states.

"And there is always plenty of small game following herds of elephants," he informs. The elephants pull up by the roots at times, trees measuring 12 to 18 inches in diameter, they eating the leaves. Then come the small game eager for what is left. Elephants have been known to travel as far as 80 miles in a single night.

A herd of approximately 40 elephants was once seen by Ingalls on and along the railroad track near Sakania. "I stopped the train and reversed the engine in case the leader came toward us. The male remained motionless, but one of the females in the lead came on. I backed the engine, opening the cylinder taps to let the steam blow through, and that frightened her." Africa's bright future, in the opinion of Ingalls, is not based alone on the fact that much of it is still undeveloped, and on the animal life and beauty of scenery, but on the fact that "there is not a mineral in the world that is not found in Africa."
